Conventions had been held before, meetings had been called, and Stockholders, Direc ora and the public bad proposed amendments and argued "reform" that man is bair to. Sold at the manufactory, No. 86 Mai. until the whole subject had been pronounced a bore by the mass of the public, and they were almost erady to cry "away with all such corrupt corporations as cannot more satisfactorily settle their own grievances."

The four great eastern liurs, the New York Central, the New York & Eric, the Pennsylvania Central, and the Baltimore & Ohio, had met by their representatives and adopted a plan of organization. and rules for their own guidance. They worked for the great Eastern interest, but West of these lines was a system of Roads far exceeding the Eastern in number and length. There were some eighty roads in the States of Ohio, I idiana, Illinois Michigan, and Wisconsin that were to be cared for and for whose guidance some plan must be found or the evils of competition would forever injure and retard them. Animosities were springing up between competing lines, which could result in no good, but much evil. Bates were cut down to ruinous figures and the general disastrons effects of such a course was evident to all thinking men. Such was the position of Railway affairs in the West when this Convention was called. The Committee over whose signatures the call was issued, have fallen upon my rathway, from the fair sufferers whom | were men who had practical knowledge of these evils, and who were interested in bring about a better state of affairs. These gentlemen, Presidents of their respective roads, drew up a plan of organization, and a series of rules and regulations, being much the same as those of the castern roads, and presented the same to the Convention, composed of representatives of the roads north of the Ohto, and east of the Mississippi rivers. Forty-three roads responded to the call and were represented by Presidents, Vice Presidents, Superintendents or Directors. The plan of organization we publish in another past of to-day's paper, and we commend a careful perusal of it to our readers, that they may see upon what basis the oads propose to operate.

The main points of discussion has been on the abolishment of all runners and solicitors of freight and passengers, and on the connection of Railroads with Express companies. These points have been largely discussed, and argued at length. The evils of the runners and agents to the Eastern lines was forcibly presented by the President of the New York and Eric Road. He most urgently advised the Western roads, to abolish the system entirely Upon the final vote this was done, and the roads in this compact will now stand clear of all such evils.

Upon the Express Company question much feeling was manifested, and much taient was displayed

THE SUBSCRIBERS RESPECTIn the accommuta. These were men in the IConin the arguments. There were men in the [Convention who had power of eloquence of no small capacity-men who would be known, and who would make their mark anywhere. The causes of those roads which now have existing contracts for a series of years with express Companies, was ably delended, while the other side was well presented. Of the various speakers we shall speak more particularly to-morrow. It was finally decided that no extra facilities should be granted to Express Companies, that were not allowed to other shippers. The practice of deprecating rival routes in bills and posters was also prohibited. The whole system of Western Roads is now to to be under the charge and control of these Commissioners who by their general management will do much to consolidate competing roads.

The good infigence of this Convention will be more and more apparent every day. We have great hopes and faith that this meeting of officers of railroads will do much to remove that local and petty strife which is so unworthy the dignity of great corporations, but which is so much indulged in at the present day. We believe that the roads Silica's Sayines and Doings, with his Opinion on the State of the Stat will grow out of it. Those who have come here and advocated the passage of this compact will go home to carry out their own advice, and those who have here listened to the advice and ecuncil of the others, will show that they are the real working men whom we so much need. The shoals and rapids which many feared would be the death knell to all good results from the Convention, have been passed, and the members of the meeting have gone to their homes in good feeling, determined to make at the least a vigorous effort to carry out in letter and spirit the compact which has been adopted. So mote it be.

Accident .- Saturday morning a German whose name we were unable to learn, and who lives near Walworth Ron, was severely injured by a passing train of cars about a mile from this city. He was coming toward the city, and looking at a freight train which was going out. The noise of this train DOMESTICS, prevented his hearing the passenger train which was coming on the other track behind him. The engineer of the latter whistled, reversed his engine and put on the brakes, but not in time to prevent striking the man and knocking him off the track -Fortunately the freight train had just passed so that the man was not thrown against it. He was severely braised and injured about his left side.
